THE LIFE of a man in politics is a series of conflicts. I have had my full share, but none was longer drawn out and at the same time more successful and important than the fight for trade agreements. I was 36 years old when in my maiden address in congress I pleaded for lower tariffs and fewer trade restrictions. I was 62 years old when in 1934 we finally won the fight to reduce them, after temporary victory with the Underwood Act of 1913 which the World War badly handicapped and the Republicans promptly tore to pieces after they came to power in 1921.

When I returned from Montevideo, I found that two things had happened. First, the President [illegible] favoring a trade agreements program. But, diametrically on the other hand, he had during my absence appointed George M. Peek to head a committee to coordinate foreign trade relations. Peek had been administrator of the AAA, disbelieved in tariff reductions and favored an embargo here and there around the country while the policies of NRA and AAA were applied. His theories, if carried out, meant the death of the trade agreements policy. The disappointment was made exactly one month after the creation of the executive committee on commercial policy.

I immediately began working with the executive committee on commercial policy to draft a trade agreements bill. I found the committee unanimous that congressional legislation should be right directing and authorizing the President to enter into reciprocal trade agreements. It was generally agreed that only this type of executive agreement could succeed. Treaties which had to be submitted for senate approval were hopeless if they contained substantial tariff reductions.

Over and above the economic role of our foreign policy, but closely tied in with it, I believed, was the political side. To me it seemed virtually impossible to develop friendly relations with other nations in the political sphere as long as we provoked their animosity in the economic sphere. How could we promote peace with them while waging war on them commercially? When I came into the state department I found in the department files fewer than 34 formal and emphatic diplomatic protests protested by as many nations follow-

...ay Settlement Ends Threat of WU Strike

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 — The threat of a nationwide Western Union Telegraph strike has ended. Forty-five thousand telegraphers voted to accept a raise of eight cents an hour, effective April 1, 1948. This was announced today by Adolph Brungs, president of the Western Union division of the Commercial Telegraphers Union, AFL.

Brungs said merely that the agreement was ratified in local meetings by "the necessary majority." About three-fourths of the 45,000 belong to the CTU and the rest to two local AFL affiliates.

MAJOR CHANGE PROPOSED IN RELIEF PLAN

Two Proposals Made as Senators Debate European Relief.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—Two new proposals for major changes in the European recovery program were tossed today into hte congressional foreign aid debate.

One would switch the whole emphasis of the program, to give the United States administrator—and congress—greater control over how the money is used.

The other is intended to ease the strain on this country's food supply by letting Latin America ship food to Europe in exchange for United States machinery.

Eighteen Republican senators agreed at a meeting late last night that the program should be used to "finance projects, not deficits."

They said they favored a chance which would compel the 16 Marshall plan nations to submit specific recovery projects to the U. S. administrator, who could either accept or reject them.

Some Plans Eliminated

Senator Ball (R-Minn), spokesman for the group, said the administrator would be directed to hold back aid that might be used for nationalization or socialization of industry—or for "expensive" social security systems which would "deaden incentive."

As the Marshall plan stands now, the Minnesotan said, the United States would merely "underwrite European trade deficits." (A trade deficit exists when a nation loses money by importing more than it exports.)

The present plan, he added, would give the European countries almost complete control over how the money is used.

The program developed by the 18 Republicans would give that power to the administrator, who should be responsible to congress, rather than the state department.

Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the senate Republican policy committee said in a Lancaster, Pa., speech last night that "we can accomplish as much with half the sum proposed" if the arministrator is authorized to control the spending of the aid money.

Barter Proposed

The plan to make European aid easier on the United States by setting up a barter system with Latin America was suggested yesterday by C. A. Barrett of Pittsburgh.

Barrett, an industrial engineer and American Legion director, told the senate foreign relations committee that under his proposal—

"We keep our dollars at home, we provide jobs at home, and we get the food we need to send to Europe without straining our own economy."

Members of the committee listened with frank approval.

When Barrett had finished testifying, Chairman Vandenberg (R-Mich) and Senators Connally (D-Tex), Hickenlooper (R-Iowa), George (D-Ga), and Capper (R-Kas) all praised his suggestion.

Latin American diplomats indicated last night that the Barrett plan probably will be taken up at the forthcoming Bogota, Colombia, inter-American conference.

In his Lancaster speech, Taft hinted at a compromise on disputed points of the recovery program.

"I am hopeful," he said, "that there may be amicable settlement of all differences."

But he said he still wants a cut in the $6,800,000,000 total proposed for the first 15 months of the program.

PLAN COUNTY ROAD CHANGES

Engineers Propose Abandoning Routes and Bridges in Dam Area.

Approximately three miles of county roads, one large bridge and several small bridges are marked for abandonment on the Army engineers maps of the Marion county area within the Delaware dam flood control project, County Engineer Walter W. Johnson said today.

Engineers from the project headquarters in Huntington, W. Va., conferred with the county commissioners here Thursday and explained the federal project as they affect the Marion county highways.

No action was taken by the commissioners relative to engineer's proposals. Final disposition of the roads, Johnson said, will probably hinge on whatever proposals the state may have on its routes in the dam area which link Marion county roads involved.

Proposed Changes

Roads slated to be vacated are the extension of state route 47 east of Route 23 designated as county road 86, and portions of county roads 125 and 142, all in the section northeast of Norton.

The large bridge to be abandoned is the one across the Olentangy river on county road 86. The smaller bridges are on routes 125 and 142. All three are gravel roads.

State route 229, known as the county-line road between Marion and Delaware counties, runs east and west through the dam area south of Norton. The engineers have proposed to raise this road, keeping it open except in times of extreme high water.

Suggestion by Johnson

A proposal was made by Johnson at the conference that the route be abandoned across the reservoir in favor of a new road up the east side, joining county road 140 which runs east through Waldo toward Mt. Gilead. The county engineer pointed out that the cost of a new road up the east side of the reservoir would be no greater than the cost of raising state route 229.

Retail Training Class To Open For Clerks Here Monday Night

MISS MARGUERITE LOOS

"School days" will start again for Marion store salesmen and saleswomen when Miss Marguerite Loos, state supervisor of distributive education, calls the first class of the Institute of Retail Training to order Monday at 7 p. m. in the auditorium of Central Junior High school.

It will not be "readin' 'ritin' and 'rithmetic" Miss Loos brings to her students, but the "Psychology of Selling." Her topic will be "Modern Methods To Increase Sales Ability," and Miss Loos knows whereof she speaks. In addition to having graduated from Ohio State university in business administration and completing a year of graduate work at the Research Bureau of Retail Training at Pittsburgh Pa., she has had 15 years of retail experience as a personnel director, store manager, and manufacturer's sales promotion representative.

Miss Loos comes to Marion following her recent appearance as a major speaker at the national convention of the Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Distributors at Atlantic City. She is also national chairman of the Distributive Education club of America.

Motion Picture

The students at the institute will also see the amusing instructional motion picture "By Jupitor" which teaches that "courtesy is contagious." This sound picture was originally produced for Marshall Field and Co. and is regarded by business leaders as one of the best instructional films extant on this vital business subject.

Enrollments continue to pour into the Chamber of Commerce from sales and service personnel of local business firms who wish to profit by the instruction the Institute of Retail Training offers.

Anyone whose job is to sell a service or a product to the consumer is eligible to enroll for the institute. The fee for the entire course is $1, and enrollment blanks may be obtained from any Marion employer or from the Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Frye In Charge

The institute, under the direction of Miss Murl E. Frye, coordinator of distributive education at Harding High, will conduct five other two-hour sessions on successive Monday nights after the opening session. The subjects which will be presented are: "The Customer Speaks Her Mind," "Knowing Merchandise and How To Use It", "Store Services To Increase Your Sales"; "Fashion Coordinating—Modeling" and "What Personality Means in Business."

Upon completion of the course a certificate of achievement will be awarded to students who have completed at least five of the six sessions. The course, which will close March 8, is under the sponsorship of the Retail Board of Managers of the Chamber of Commerce, the Marion board of education, and the state department of education.

YOUNG TRIAL ANSWER FILED

Prosecutor Attacks Defense Counsel's Request for Change of Venue.

County Prosecutor James E. Reed filed a memorandum in common pleas court today replying to the motion for a change in venue for the trial of Edwin D. Young.

Paul D. Michel, defending Young who is facing trial for first degree murder in the Mrs. Zora Gerbes slaying, asked for a change of venue alleging a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in Marion county.

Judge Paul D. Smith will hold a hearing on the motion at 1:15 p. m. Monday.

Prosecutor Reed alleges the defendant's motion is not well taken in respect to whether or not a fair trial can be had. The prosecutor contends that this can only be determined after a reasonable effort has been made to impanel a jury.

Recalls Roush Case

The memorandum also replies to other allegations made in the motion for the change of venue, pointing out in detail the publicity given the Roush murder case in 1938 at which time Mr. Michel was county prosecutor.

Quoting from the memorandum:

"A review of the defense counsel's newspaper clippings of the account of another "Marion county murder prosecuted in 1938 by Mr. Michel hardly supports the contention that the case at bar is "unparalleled in the annals of Marion county." We find that the Roush case which Mr. Michel prosecuted in 1938 merited a Marion Star Peach Extra, with six pictures on the front page including that of Mr. Michel, and that it continued to receive front page headline notice thirteen separate times before trial, with repeated quotations from Mr. Michel himself and other pictures.

"We do not believe that Mr. Michel is at all sincere in his motion since he himself was interviewed last Monday by a representative of the Sunday Star, a tabloid published in Columbus and widely distributed and read in Marion county. At the same time, he permitted and encouraged his client to tell his story to that representative.

"We feel that Mr. Michel is being a trifle inconsistent, to put it mildly, when he charges in his

March of Dimes Fund Over $4,000

With contributions amounting to $155.08 from the pupils of St. Mary Parochial school, and from other sources, today's Marion county total in the March of Dimes is $4,041.13, Virgil F. Dye, county chairman, reported.

The St. Mary school contributions, the records show, represented the allowances of many of the children and a number of the others took advantage of the weather and obtained their contributions by shoveling snow from sidewalks.

Additional gifts are from the Auxiliary to Dyer J. Bird Post, Rainbow Division, $5 and Sosnowski Rebekah Lodge $2. Today's contributions are exclusive of the approximately 500 containers placed in the business sections of the city at the beginning of the campaign. These will be collected Monday Mr. Dye said today.

DEATH CLAIMS MAN WHO PUT WORLD IN AIR

Orville Wright, Plane Inventor, Stricken in Dayton at Age of 76.

By The Associated Press

DAYTON, O., Jan. 31—Death came to Orville Wright last night 44 years after he put wings on the world with the first flight in a heavier-than-air machine.

The 76-year-old co-inventor of the airplane died in his sleep under an oxygen tent at Miami Valley hospital at 10:40 p. m.

Dr. A. B. Brower, his physician said Wright succumbed to a lung congestion and coronary arteriosclerosis, a heart disease.

The world's pioneer aviator entered the hospital last Tuesday after suffering his second heart attack of recent months. He recovered rapidly from the first attack Oct. 10, 1947.

The aged scientist took a turn for the worse Wednesday night when a lung congested, held staunchly for a few hours early yesterday and then sank slowly into a coma that preceded death.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace A. Wright and Mrs. H. S. Miller of Dayton, nieces and a nephew, were at his side at the end.

First to send messages of condolence were Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, commanding general of the air materiel command at nearby Wright Field, and Col. E. A. Deeds, chairman of the board of National Cash Register Co. and the aviator's close friend.

General McNarney sounded the note which most clearly showed the international character of the slight little man whose dreams turned into reality within his lifetime.

"Our great hope," said McNarney, "is that through the gift he gave the nation, America will be empowered to maintain world peace."

Funeral Arranged

Simple funeral services will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. (EST) Monday in the First Baptist church here, of which Wright was a member. Dr. Charles L. Seasholes, pastor, will conduct them. Burial will be in Woodland cemetery.

Friends may call at the Boyer mortuary between 3 p. m. and 9 p. m. Sunday.

Meanwhile, Gov. Thomas J. Herbert of Ohio, who was a combat flier in World War I, joined those paying tribute to the inventor.

"His genius has benefited all mankind," Herbert said at Columbus. "It is typical of him that he deplored and sorrowed at the destructive use made by some nations of his great invention.

"His vision resulted in a new era of worldwide transportation which has affected the life of every inhabitant of the globe."

Without Orville Wright's cloth, glue and wood contruption and his 12-second flight over the sands of Kitty Hawk, N. C., in 1903, there would be no airforce, but the inventor himself readily admitted he never had envisioned his airplane as the world's big military weapon.

"Quite obviously," he remarked once, "Wilbur (his late brother and co-inventor) and I could not foresee what awful use could be made of the airplane. But it is, and will be of tremendous importance in peace."

Favors Peaceful Pursuits

While he aided American military might by conferring with Wright field engineers on many air force projects, Wright turned to peaceful uses of the airplane with more interest.

Along with his abiding interest in things aerial, Wright clung to a native shyness and modesty. He lived in close retirement most of his years. Once his noted impromptu wit brought forth this explanation of his aversion to speaking in public:

"The most talkative bird in the world is a parrot, but he's a poor flier."

Orville Wright was born in Dayton, Aug. 19, 1871, the son of Bishop Milton Wright of the United Brethren church. Ministerial careers were planned for both Orville and his older brother, Wilbur, but a spinner toy from their father changed this:

The little gadget, fashioned from cork, bamboo and paper, formed two screws which were driven in opposite directions by rubber bands.

That whirling device fired their youthful imaginations. Through boyhood years they toyed with the idea that man could fly. Thoughts of the ministry faded. They opened a bicycle shop and the boyhood dreams returned.

They repeated the flying experiments of those who had preceded them and failed. Then they discarded these theories, built themselves a wind tunnel and wrested laws of aero-dynamics

BELIEVE COLD BREAK ON WAY

"Slightly Warmer" Promised; 1 Below Last Night; Gas Situation Unchanged.

"Not quite so cold" weather for the weekend was the forecast issued today for Marion and the state by the Columbus weather bureau as the cold wave which has gripped Ohio for the last two weeks appeared to be starting on the way out.

The critical fuel gas situation in Marion remained the same with curtailments still being enforced and places of business still being asked to keep pressures as low as possible.

One Below Last Night

The mercury in Marion dropped to one below zero last night from the high of 16 reported during the 24-hour period yesterday. At 8 a. m. today the official reading was one above. Temperatures a year ago were 49 for high and 27 low.

"Cloudy with some slight snow tonight and Sunday" was forecast for the weekend.

Overheated furnaces were blamed for two fires in Marion yesterday and early today. Small loss resulted from both.

Ohio Situation

Cleveland, where the mercury dropped to minus five, experienced its coldest weather since 1944 and the coldest Jan. 31 on record.

The Ohio river division engineers said at Cincinnati the danger of a complete freeze-over of the Ohio probably had passed.

The mercury dipped to zero and as low as 25 below over the New England area with some communities reporting the season's lowest. Yesterday's low was -41 at Mount Washington, Mass. There were sub-zero marks, also, in the Middle Atlantic states and the lower Great Lakes region.

RITES FOLLOW HINDU CUSTOM AT NEW DELHI

Thousands of Grief-Stricken People See Body Carried to River Bank.

By The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 31 — Mohandas K. Gandhi's youngest son touched off the funeral pyre that consumed the wasted body of the martyred Mahatma today in the Hindu tradition.

Tends of thousands of Indians, sobbing and shouting the Mahatma's name, surged forward as Devadas Gandhi, heavy with grief, placed live coals on the pyre just above his father's heart and set ablaze the lower portion of the pile of sandalwood logs.

A tremendous sobbing chant surged from the crowd—a Hindu hymn for India's prophet of peace, who was struck down by an assassin's bullet as he went to a prayer meeting. In a mighty roaring unison, the crowd chanted the prayers of the last rites, as police struggled to restrain the grieving people.

Devadas Gandhi's face was lined with the strain as he applied the coals. The sandalwood crackled. Smoke spiraled heavenward.

Ashes To Be Gathered

The Mahatma's ashes are to remain at the pyre, on the banks of the river Jumna, for a day and a half. Then they are to be gathered and taken to the river Ganges—sacred to his Hindu faith—and thrown into the waters in the manner traditional with Hindus.

India was gripped with fear of what may come in the wake of Gandhi's violent death. Rioting in Bombay, which took 15 lives yesterday, subsided somewhat, but in Poona, the office of an extremist Hindu newspaper was burned.

Sullen Poona crowds attacked the property of persons known to have opposed Gandhi. Tilak Memorial hall was set afire as crowds searched for anyone possibly connected with the assassin. Bombay police arrested five persons suspected of being implicated.

New Delhi police disclosed that Gandhi's accused assassin had been arraigned secretly and held without bail for investigation of murder. He was arraigned under the name of Narayan Vinayak Godse, 25, of Poona. The 25-year-old assassin had pumped bullets into Gandhi's chest and leg at close range.

Nehru Rescues Woman

The procession to the Jumna river was tumultous all the way. At one point, Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru was reported to have rescued a woman endangered by the crush.

Women fainted in the tremendous crush of people. Children collapsed under foot. Men bled from wounds inflicted by the flailing sticks of those fighting for a view of the procession.

Hour by hour the crowd grew along the five-mile route from Birla house to the river, until tens of thousands of Indians milled about in turmoil, ceasely shouting the name of the Mahatma. The cry "Victory to Gandhi" rang out frequently above the clamor.

People crowded the rooftops, clung precariously on the walls, crushed into any possible vantage point along the line of march as the procession crept ahead, travelling less than a mile an hour.

Bombay Sees Violent Battle Between Two Hindu Factions

By The United Press

BOMBAY, India, Jan. 31—Violent fighting between Hindu factions as a result of Mohandas K. Gandhi's assassination broke out in Bombay for the second time today but was quelled by police rifle fire and a curfew.

Today's attacks were launched by members of the All-India Congress party, who regarded Gandhi as their spiritual head, against the militant Hindu Mahasabh, a Communal organization.

The young Hindu who assassinated Gandhi in New Delhi yesterday was believed to be a member of the Mahasabha organization.

The congress followers attacked offices of the Mahasabha organization and stormed the residences of its chief officers. Most of the fighting was in the Girgaum road area one of the three districts rocked by fighting yesterday in which six were killed and 45 wounded.

Police dispersed a mob attacking the Mahababha office by firing over demonstrators' heads and imposed a curfew in the area until 7 a. m. tomorrow.

A tour of the city showed that yesterday's rioting in the Girgaum, Mahabouri and Lamington road areas had turned into widespread looting. All these areas are predominantly Hindu.

By contrast, everything was quiet and normal in Moslem areas of the city, which previously had been the major trouble spots.

The fighting and its threat of widespread violence brought out every available policeman in Bombay. They were assigned to patrol, to quell disturbances if they began again, other forces, including three battalions of troops and a squadron of tanks, were kept in readiness for action.

All business was closed in the city and all public transportation halted because of the national day of mourning over Gandhi's death declared by the India government.

All four morning papers appeared with heavy black borders around their front pages, which devoted exclusively to news of Gandhi's death and funeral.

LAUSCHE BACK IN CAMPAIGN

Entry Into Governor's Race Promises Bitter Democratic Battle.

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Jan. 31 — The eleventh-hour entry of former Gov. Frank J. Lausche into the Democratic race for governor today sounded the opening bell of a bitter battle for ballots by two ex-Cleveland mayors.

Indicating political "bossism" would be a major issue in the pre-primary Democratic campaign, Lausche last night threw off his shroud of silence and plunged into the contest against Candidate Ray T. Miller.

"In the interest of democracy," the bushy-haired Clevelander declared, "it is essential that the members of our political parties be given the opportunity to select their standard-bearers without the compulsion that comes from the gaping shotguns held by political overlords.

"I will, therefore, be a candidate for nomination for governor at the Democratic primaries in May," he added.

Spiking published reports he would "forfeit his candidacy by failing to file petitions before the Feb. 4 deadline, Lausche said in a terse, three-paragraph statement that his nominating papers "have been and now are in circulation."

Lausche supporters indicated his "gaping shotguns" blast was aimed directly at Miller, a former Cuyahoga county Democratic chairman, and at Ohio county units which have climbed on the Miller bandwagon.

Miller, a fiery campaigner expected to add plenty of fuel to the Democratic "civil war," has claimed the current support of a dozen county chairman and tentative sanction by 59 of the 88 state party units. He entered the race Dec. 3 and has been campaigning vigorously throughout the state.

Lausche, who had had numerous bitter clashes with Miller behind the Ohio political curtain, has long been dependent upon independent voters for large shares of his ballot count.

The former Ohio chief executive, son of Slovenian immigrant parents, became a common pleas judge here in 1930. He was elected mayor by landslide proportions in 1941 and 1943, and swept into the governor's chair despite a Republican presidential trend in the 1944 elections.

He retired to private law practice here after being defeated by a slim 40,000-vote margin by Gov. Thomas J. Herbert in 1946.

Twenty years of service as a city patrolman was ended by Henry B. Tong of 324 Pearl street today. His retirement on pension was approved by the police pension board in a meeting last night. His active association with the city police force was scheduled to end at 3 p. m. Mr. Tong joined the force Feb. 1, 1928.

Two new members of the police pension board, Harold Robinson, councilman-at-large and Harold Smith, fifth ward councilman, began their duties. Mr. Robinson was elected chairman. Other matters of business included approval of the police pension payroll of $1,431.57 for January.

The retirement of Mr. Tong brings the total number of men on the pension list to 15 the records show. The vacancy, which is the second on the city police staff, will not be filled until after an examination for positions on the force is held Feb. 19, E. O. Uncapher, service-safety director said today. The examination will be held at 7:30 p. m. at Harding High school. A law passed by the state legislature last year designates the age limit for starting in the police department as 23 to 28 years. With one exception, applications on file at present are beyond this age limit, Mr. Uncapher stated.

Patrolman Tong was hailed into municipal court this morning where Judge Dexter Hazen, in the presence of city patrolmen, held a "mock trial."

motion that the State is endeavoring to try the case in the newspapers, since Mr. Michel himself prepared an extra copy of his motion and delivered it to a reporter for The Marion Star at the time he filed it in court (We also were given a copy of Mr. Reed's memorandum), fondly hoping to see it in the newspaper, along with the details of his purported defense."

"Clouding" Strategy Alleged

Stating that the trial technique of a criminal lawyer in a confession case is to try the prosecuting officials in order to "cloud the issue and cover up the facts," Prosecutor Reed says in his memorandum that at the Jan. 24 hearing when Young first appeared in common pleas court, Mr. Michel informed the prosecuting attorney that such tactics would be part of his defense.

In reference to the remarks made by Mr. Michel in his motion about a "highly amused sheriff" referring to the group photograph taken as the party stepped off the train, Mr. Reed says, in reference to Sheriff Retterer: "We feel that his diligent efforts in apprehending this defendant will long be remembered and in no way or manner created any bias or prejudice against the accused."

Overheated Furnaces Start Two Fires

Two small fires resulting from overheated furnaces yesterday and early today were extinguished by Marion firemen, Chief Owen Sifritt reported today.

At the home of G. P. Chase of 183 East Mark street at 3:50 p. m. yesterday, sparks from the chimney ignited the roof. An area of the roof about five feet square was burned and resulted in a loss of about $50. The East Mark street station and the aerial truck from Central fire station answered the call.

The flooring on the first floor at the home of Mrs. Ruby Krohmer of 379 South State street was slightly damaged by fire early this morning. The top of a new furnace recently installed in the house is very near the basement ceiling, Chief Sifritt said, and the flooring became overheated. The fire was discovered by a member of the family at 1:04 a. m. and firemen from the central station responded. A small loss occurred.

They added that despite some improvement this morning, her condition was critical.

The physicians said a sharp rise in the Woolworth heiress' temperature last night indicated that her recent intestinal operation had not been entirely successful. They added that another operation was being considered.

WRIGHT

from crude frameworks of wood and metal.

Made First Flight

Out of years of experimenting came an airplane. At Kitty Hawk Orville Wright took his place in a flimsy looking, box-kite affair of wood, wire and cloth. A sputtering motor spun two crude propellers.

Wilbur steadied the machine as it moved down a mono-rail track and then for 12 seconds Orville skimmed the dunes traveling 120 feet in the first sustained human flight in a power-propelled, heavier-than-air device.

Four flights were made that day. Orville made the first. Then he and Wilbur alternated in the others. On one of the attempts Wilbur stayed up 59 seconds and swooped 852 feet across the dunes. The only witnesses were five persons—life guards and curious villagers.

"That flight convinced us," Mr. Wright said later, "that our theories were sound. We could control the craft, even if it was largely by shifting the weight of our bodies from one side to the other."

Four decades after his first flight he piloted the world's then newest and biggest transport plane over Wright Field at Dayton, O., for a brief part of a 50-minute flight, his first spell at piloting in 25 years and the first time he had been aloft in five. The experience, he said, was "wonderful" and he "enjoyed every minute of it."

"I guess I ran the whole plane for a minute but I let the machine take care of itself, he added. "I always said airplanes would fly themselves if you left them alone."

Honored by Nation

In 1943, on the 40th anniversary of the first flight, several hundred notables gathered in Washington to commemorate the event. President Franklin D. Roosevelt sent a message paying tribute to the Wright brothers.

"The gift to the world by Orville and Wilbur Wright," his message said, "has made a broad highway of the skies over which time and distance are cut a hundredfold.

"It is our duty to keep these air highways free and open in order that all peoples of the world may more and more become good neighbors—better neighbors—and that the instrument of flying shall serve to keep the peace once it has again been achieved.

"Orville and Wilbur Wright did not labor and toil to create an instrument of war. Knowing them as I do, their inspiration was not a destructive weapon. The impelling force which drove them on to ultimate success was to make a contribution to the progress of men."

Congress adopted a resolution in connection with the anniversary formally recognizing the Wright brothers' flight and expressing the Nation's "gratitude and respect for this signal and astounding contribution to the progress of the world."

First to fly, Orville was pilot too in the world's first fatal airplane wreck. A propeller blade shattered as he and Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge, U.S.A., were flying above Fort Myer, Va., in September, 1908. Selfridge was killed as the plane crashed and Orville suffered a broken leg and internal injuries.

Only one of the five who participated in the Kitty Hawk flights is alive. He is John T. Daniels, one of a Coast Guard trio who helped the Wrights. Wilbur Wright died in 1912.

Daniels entered the Norfolk, Va., naval hospital yesterday a few hours before Orville Wright died.

The three men were on duty at the Kill Devil Hill Coast Guard station the day of the flight. When the Wright brothers felt a northeast wind, they hoisted a flag and the three Coast Guardsmen came running to help.

Wright's nearest relatives at his death were nieces and nephews. Besides the three at his deathbed, there are Mr. and Mrs. Milton Wright of Dayton and Mrs. John H. Jameson of Evanston, Ill. He also is survived by a sister-in-law, Mrs. Reuchlin Wright of Lawrence, Kas.

Wright Dies Before Receiving Medal

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—Orville Wright died without receiving the medal for merit which President Truman had intended awarding him for his wartime services.

Wright had been expected in Washington Jan. 15, but sent word he would be unable to make the trip. Plans then were begun to have Gen. Carl Spaatz, air force chief of staff, and John F. Victory, secretary of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, go to Dayton to present the award.

Wright's last visit to Washington was late in October for a meeting of the NACA, of which he had been a member for 27 years.

During the war, Wright served also on the inventors council and among other things took part in development of a decoding machine.

YOUTHFUL SLAYER DIES IN PEN CHAIR

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31—George M. Sexton of Sandusky died in the old wooden electric chair at Ohio penitentiary last night.

The 21-year-old Negro, praying until the current stilled his low mumble, was put to death for the holdup slaying of Otto Hoffman, a Sandusky industrial watchman.

He was pronounced dead at 8:13 p. m. by Dr. John B. Eckstrom, prison physician.

Two eye specialists removed Sexton's eyes within minutes after his death for shipment to the sight restoration eye bank at Columbia university. The cornea were sent at his request to restore sight to blinded war veterans.

Sexton showed no particular emotion except his continued prayer, which began as guards bent to strap him in the chair. His was clearly audible until the low voice was muffled by the traditional black rubber mask, but hum of the generators was broken by the throwing of the switch.

The youth ate his last meal of fried chicken and sweet potatoes with only the prison's Protestant chaplain in attendance.

He had only two visitors in his last hours, an aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Adcock of Sandusky.

Your Good Health

By DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN

Treating Stomach Ulcers

The stomach is an extraordinary organ, lined with a mucous membrane made up of a layer of cells about 1/700th of an inch thick, which dips and folds into deep pits and fissures. It is in these fissures that the stomach's 25,000,000 glands are located. These glands are, in effect, chemical factories which made hydrochloric acid, pepsin, and other juices necessary to the stomach's chief task, which is the digestion of meat and other protein foods

Sometimes, for various reasons, the stomach glands secrete too much acid and there is evidence that this over-production of acid may be one of the main factors in causing stomach ulcer, though it is only fair to say that the ultimate reasons behind the process are still not well understood.

It is estimated that about one out of every ten people have had ulcer of the stomach or intestine at one time or another The first occurrence of an ulcer is likely to follow some infection, such as a severe sore throat, or to follow a sudden or continuous physical or mental strain All of these things may also play a part in causing the recurrence of ulcers

When an ulcer first develops, the person affected should be put to bed for complete rest, and his food should be restricted to fluids or semi-solid foods taken in small amounts at frequent intervals. Many physicians treat these patients by giving them milk and cream every hour, together with alkaline powders. The milk and cream may have minerals, vitamins, proteins and sugar concentrates added to it.

The patient should remain in bed for about three weeks, assuming that there are no complications, such as severe bleeding from the ulcer

A large number of alkaline substances, such as baking soda, magnesium oxide, and calcium carbonate have been employed in treating ulcers Magnesium trisilicate seems to be more beneficial in getting rid of the acid for a longer period of time than these other substances Aluminum hydroxide absorbs acids and is also effective. Sedative or quieting drugs may be used in some cases

Many physicians think that a patient with ulcers should not use tobacco and should avoid alcoholic beverages, as well as those containing caffeine.

The general treatment of the patient is important, too. For example overtiredness, exposure to infections, worry, and mental shock, all should be eliminated, insofar as possible It has been found, in fact, that in some cases merely taking a vacation, with all that it means in relaxation, rest and change, will produce a cure.

GANDHI

the head of the procession, which grew constantly as spectators fell in at the end. The great mass of humanity oozed toward the river amid wails of lamentation. Every hundred yards or so the procession was forced to halt.

All through the night a great crowd had kept a reverent vigil outside Birla house. This was a brooding crowd, standing silently through the chill early morning in mute tribute to the great leader.

Long Files View Body

As the sun broke through the morning mist, long files of the people passed into Birla house and through the open door of the room where Gandhi lay on a rose strewn bier.

Gandhi's body had been bathed through the night in accordance with Hindu tradition. At 4 a. m., a simple prayer service was conducted in the flickering light of castor oil lamps, burning constantly to light the way of the Mahatma to heaven.

The room was heavy with the scent of roses. Gandhi's relatives and his close friends sat around the bier, chanting from the scriptures of the Hindu, Mohammedan and Christian religions the passages best loved by the departed saint of India. The women sang simple hymns he had loved.

On the pallet on which he used to sleep lay the Mahatma's body, his face austere in death. A white robe was drawn up to the throat. Red roses and rose petals were strewn over the robe.

The door of the room was thrown open at 5 a. m. to admit the people in a long single file, in reward for their night of vigil.

Just before noon the frail body was placed on a flower-draped platform atop an automobile. Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and Deputy Prime Minister Sardar Vallabhai Patel rode close behind as the guard of honor.

Armored Vehicles Used

Eight members of the governor general's body guard and armored fighting vehicles led the procession, clearing the way for it. A moving line of husky soldiers, their hands locked to form a chain along each side of the road, edged along with the procession to prevent the people from passing through. The dense masses showered flowers from the sidewalks, windows and housetops as the funeral car passed by on the circuitous route to the river.

Before the procession started, disorder broke out in crowds that clamored until they were given a look at the body outside Birla house, home of a millionaire industrialist friend of Gandhi. Women and children were trampled. No serious injuries were reported.

The crowd before Birla house was unruly. Twice it smashed military lines. Finally the corpse, flat on a wooden cot and covered with a white robe, was shown from a second-floor balcony. It lay there three quarters of an hour.

Cot Carried Indoors

Half an hour before noon, four men, traditional in Hindu funerals, carried the cot indoors. Then they took the body out and put it on a flower-covered platform on top of an automobile.

The procession stretched at least two miles in its early stages. Eight armored vehicles of Governor General Earl Mountbatten's bodyguard preceded it. Chains of husky soldiers, hands locks, moved along either side.

At 5 a. m. the outer door of the room where the body lay was thrown open and the people filed past for their last Darshan (holy sight of Gandhi.

The body was to be placed at 11 a. m. on an open carriage and, escorted by the people afoot, taken to the burning ground by the holy river Jumna for cremation on a log pile.

AMERICAN SEIZED GANDHI'S KILLER

By The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 31—An American by-stander told today how he seized the assassin of Mohandas Gandhi before the police took the man into custody.

The American, who had gone to Gandhi's prayer meeting, identified himself as Thomas Reiner, Springdale, Conn. He gave this account:

"People were standing as though paralyzed, I moved around them, grasped his (the slayer's) shoulder and spun him around, then took a firmer grip on his shoulders.

"Royal Indian Airforce men disarmed him and police took him into custody. I did not see him do anything to indicate he wanted to kill himself, and I don't believe reports he tried to kill himself at that time."

21 DIE IN TWO U.S. ACCIDENTS IN EUROPE

By The Associated Press

DIGNE, FRANCE, Jan. 31—Discovery of 12 bodies in the wreckage of an air force transport today brought to 21 the total known dead in two United States airplane crashes in southern France.

Reports reached here that searchers had found the bodies of three American women, five children and four crewmen where the first plane fell. The crash occurred near a village in the French Alps. The craft was a C-47.

The second plane, a B-17 Flying Fortress, went down and exploded on a search for the transport. Police said one man in its crew of 10 survived.

Both planes struck within a 20-mile rudius of Digne, which is about 75 miles northeast of Marseille.

The twin-engined transport had been missing since Tuesday on a flight from Istres Airbase, near Marseilles, to Udine, Italy. It was taking the women and children toward Trieste to join their husbands and fathers, servicemen.

"Show Must Go On" Didn't Do So at Lima

By The Associated Press

LIMA, O., Jan. 31—The tradition that "the show must go on" was broken here last night.

Approximately 400 persons waited for an hour in Memorial hall for the curtain to rise on a hillbilly show. The players did not appear and no one even showed up to sell tickets.

Hunters Drug store, which had collected $290 in advance ticket sales, began making refunds today.

The Lima News, which with radio station WLOK had advertised the event, said it had asked its attorney to investigate.

The newspaper said the advertising was placed by an out-of-town man.

AREA YOUTH SESSION HELD

Regional Conference of Leaders Takes Place in Marion.

The Great Lakes region of the Ohio Youth for Christ conference was held here Thursday at the Y. M. C. A. Preliminaries of the meeting were given at the opening session at 1:30 p. m. by Ed T. Darling, vice president of the region and director of Youth for Christ in Detroit, Mich. He stated that "interest and enthusiasm in Youth for Christ is stimulated when local directors and regional representatives get together to discuss their problems and share their accomplishments. This was the purpose of the conference. Jack Wennell of Logan county led in prayer after which all present were introduced. Kenneth Cummings, field representative for Ohio, Michigan and part of Canada, led the discussion which followed.

Problems Discussed

The purpose of the discussion was to acquaint the directors with facts concerning the possibility of securing international speakers for their rallies, and to aid them in advertising, and other rally problems. It was suggested that at every rally distribution of the national magazine, "Youth for Christ," should be made, as this magazine presents a worldwide picture of the work which is being done all over the world. Already there are over 1,400 Youth for Christ rallies in operation and new ones are beginning constantly, it was stated. These rallies are being held throughout every state in this country, and in Germany, Holland, Italy, England, Ireland, China, Philippines, Japan, Alaska, Canada, South America, Mexico, France, Cuba, Panama Canal Zone, Australia, and various other places. "Youth for Christ is definitely being used of God in a miraculous way today," it was commented. Statistics given show that "91.8 per cent of the young folk who find Christ as their Saviour in Youth for Christ rallies go back to their churches and become strong workers." Youth for Christ is not a church work but is designed to win youth for Christ, interdenominationally and internationally."

Following the business meeting, the delegates were served a banquet. Special music was provided by Dr. C. E. Hershey and Mr. Cummings. Present were: Rev. and Mrs. Peter Pascoe, Bellefontaine; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wennell, Logan county; Don Peltier and Claude Richards, Lima; James Leslie, Marseilles; E. J. Shady and Frank Harder, Pandora; Harley McClenathan, Mt. Vernon; Milton Stout and John Aker, Logan county; Ralph Uhlinger, Arthur McQuigg and Rev. S. W. Terjung, Knox county; Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Hershey, James Sanderson, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Brown and Miss Betty Gay, Marion; Mr. Darling of Detroit and Mr. Cummings, field director of Great Lakes region.

Public Session Held

The evening rally was held in the Emmanuel Baptist church and was open to the public. Mr. Cummings led the song service. A vocal ensemble from the Toledo Youth for Christ presented several numbers, and a trumpet duo, also from Toledo, presented several numbers. Miss Dortha Goyer and Miss Joyce Jett of Marion offered a octo-marimba and vibra harp duet. Mr. Cummings sang several vocal selections.

The message of the evening was given by Mr. Darling. The theme was the need of Christ in the life of youth today and was entitled, "One Thing Thou Lackest," text taken from Mark 10.

The annual international Youth for Christ conference will be held at Winona Lake, Ind., in the Billy Sunday tabernacle, July 11 to 18, it was announced. At this conference many international speakers will be present and will present the world-wide outlook of Youth for Christ. The Great Lakes region will hold a special session during this conference.

GUILD ENTERTAINED

A 1 o'clock dessert luncheon was followed by a business session and program. FILES APPEAL

BUCYRUS — Appeal has been filed in the damage suit of Ralph D. Winch against Albert Krawetski, heard by a jury in common pleas court here in November. Winch sought damages for losses received in a collision between one of his trucks and an automobile operated by the defendant, on route 4 north of Bucyrus. The petit jury returned a verdict for Krawetski on his cross petition awarding him $1,700 and costs.

Galion High School Band Gives Concert

Special to The Star

GALION — Ever-popular music of the band brought out a capacity audience at Senior High school auditorium, Thursday for the annual winter concert of the Galion High school band. The 84-piece ensemble was directed by Fredolf A. W. Liddell, in a three-part program.

First part of the program consisted of four selections by the band, and a trombone solo played by Joanne Bonsteel. During the second part of the program, the high school girls', chorus of 41 voices sang three numbers with band accompaniment. The girls appeared in colorful evening dresses, standing back of the band on the stage.

Part three of the program featured the selection, "The Swiss Boy," (Air Varie), played by a cornet quartet with band accompaniment directed by Theodore Rehl, student director. Two other band selections and the high school song, brought the program to a close.

India's Leader Dies

THE death of Mohandas K. Gandhi by an assassin's hand will have momentous consequences in India.

His death may rally Hindu sentiment to strive for the ideals Gandhi envisioned; or the volatile Indian populace may turn from its late leader to the firebrands calling for war against Pakistan. The wisdom and cool-headedness of Gandhi's lieutenants and those entrusted with Pakistan's future will decide which course will be followed.

It is fortunate that the assassin wasn't a Moslem or the killing would have been the signal for a bloody civil war. As it is, his death has brought expressions of condolence from Pakistan and India's Moslems.

To the western world, Gandhi personified the enigmas of India. Small and unprepossessing, he wielded power great enough to turn out the British empire. He was a man of wealth and culture, yet he cast his lot with the poverty-stricken untouchables. He devoted his life to winning India's freedom, yet considered his triumph a failure because the country was partitioned.

One of the great lessons of Gandhi's life was that a man can become a national hero and leader without deeds of bloodshed, without demogoguery. When he said he wanted peace, he meant it, was willing to lay down his life to prove it. He deplored the rise of nationalism and the latent religious hatreds in his country. He appealed to his people's finer instincts. He stood for the brotherhood of man in the literal meaning of the term.

If ever a Utopia is achieved on earth, its inhabitants will be men with Gandhi's ideals and love of humankind.

Moley Got the Rope

CORDELL HULL'S explanation in his memoirs of what happened between him and Raymond Moley at the London economic conference in 1933 is a little different from the accepted version.

Mr. Hull says Moley—"The man who controlled presidents"—took London by storm when he arrived at the conference. It was taken for granted that the head of the Roosevelt "brain trust" had unlimited power. The trouble was that Moley himself took it for granted and proceeded to behave accordingly.

Mr. Hull, uncertain of his position, sat tight and gave the confident Moley all the rope he asked for. Moley used it. He negotiated an agreement about currency stabilization, the agreement was repudiated by President Roosevelt, Moley returned to the United States under a cloud, was transferred out of the state department and soon was out of the government entirely. It wasn't Hull who was deflated at the London economic conference, but Moley. He was the first man of many "brain trusters" to over-step authority, just as Hull was the first of many insiders to be perplexed by a method of administration that let men hang themselves in their own rope at the expense of national welfare.

No Cause for Cheers

RUSSIA'S offer to reopen negotiations for an Austrian peace settlement is greeted with cheers in Austria, which is eager to get the Russians off its back at any price. But as in all Russian offers there's a joker. This one would give the Reds the political stranglehold they have been unable to obtain so far.

In 1943, Russia agreed to treat Austria as a liberated, not a conquered, country. At Potsdam, Stalin renounced Austrian reparation claims. Austrian assets are now sought on the grounds that they really are German assets, having been acquired by the Nazis after the anschluss.

While Moscow's demands have been scaled down, they still call for such vast payments as $200,000,000 to be paid in two years, two-thirds of the oil production, oil prospecting rights in eastern Austria and a large share of Danube shipping. Collection of these claims would be carried out under terms that would take Reds to every Austrian town and village.

Having failed to establish a puppet regime by methods that worked in Hungary and Czechoslovakia, Russia is trying a new tack in Austria.

Overhauling Needed

A HOUSE armed services subcommittee is ready to begin an investigation into veterans' pensions, especially the lifetime, tax-free pensions granted disabled officers. Among the questions the subcommittee will look into is why one retired officer is disabled enough to qualify for a $6,600 pension, yet able-bodied enough to earn $125,000 as a private engineer.

An explanation also will be sought for the reason disabled officers draw 75 per cent of their base pay for life, while enlisted men are pensioned according to their degree of disability and subject to periodic re-examination.

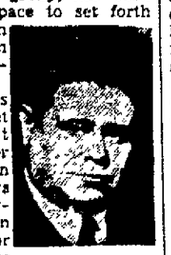
The whole system of military pensions appears in need of overhauling to erase inequities and to shake off those getting a free ride at public expense.

Scanning the Record

By George E. Sokolsky

Paper Fills Columns on Communism Without Reply.

THE "New York Herald-Tribune," inspired by Bartley C. Crum, of San Francisco, gave William Z. Foster, leader of the Communist party, about 12 columns of space, during a period of newsprint shortage, to state the position of the American Communist party in reply to a long series of questions prepared by the newspaper. No opponent of Communism, no spokesman for the Republican or Democratic parties, for the National Association of Manufacturers or any other American group, has been given similar space to set forth the American point of view in response to Foster.



SOKOLSKY

Foster was permitted to set forth, without contradiction or correction in similar news columns, anything he had in mind, true or false. I have been waiting for the "New York Herald Tribune" to call upon some American to answer Foster, but nearly a month has passed and nothing has happened.

Foster says that the Communists uphold the American constitution but adds the following:

"Under present political conditions in this country the United States constitution requires many vital democratic amendments, including provisions to guarantee the full right of the Negro people, the right to work, the right to social security, the specific right of trade-union organization, the outlawing of Anti-Semitism, special rights for women and children, the unequivocal right to vote, more complete separations of state and church, the provision of more democratic methods of constitutional amendment, the abolition of the present conservative and paralyzing system of government by checks and balances, etc."

Obviously, he would destroy our form of government, which is what he calls the "paralyzing system of government by checks and balances," the essence of the above quoted paragraph. He would, in preference, adopt the Soviet constitution, as can be noted by comparing his language with the Soviet constitution. Undoubtedly, he agrees with Leon Josephson, who once wrote in "The Communist:"

"The new Soviet constitution and electoral law are the most democratic in the world. A simple comparison of the new Soviet constitution and the electoral law with the American constitution and the American electoral system, or with the constitutions and electoral laws of any other country, conclusively proves the correctness of this statement."

Foster also said in the "Herald-Tribune" article:

"The ruling class of monopoly capitalists, who dictate our nation's economics, politics and culture, are impressing upon our people a conception of loyalty which calls for not loyalty to the nation but loyalty to the capitalist system, to their so-called free enterprise and to all the reactionary war policies that go with it. . . ."

Views Not Questioned

That is obviously untrue, but no correction was made either in the article from which I quote or in any subsequent discussion. A person, noting the space—more than one and a half pages devoted to spreading Communism before the nation—might even believe that the newspaper gives such prominence to these views because it supports them. Not a word appears in the introductory material to indicate a different view. In fact Mr. Crum makes this point:

"....If we can get an unequivocal statement of the position of the Communist party, we may be able to lessen the current hysteria to the point where we can once more have rational discussions of the issues we face."

In other words, the Communists are not to be judged by their history, their philosophy, their deeds, their acts, their activities but by what Foster happens to be willing to say and therefore about 12 columns are given him to smear, attack, vilify and lie—without refutation or rebuttal. So Foster says:

"....During the war all over Europe the big monopolists shamelessly peddled their countries' independence to Hitler, while the Communists and other patriots fought and died in the underground and on the battlefields to defend their countries...."

And that goes unchallenged in spite of the Stalin-Hitler alliance, the rape of Finland, Esthonia, Latvia and Poland, the breach of agreements concerning Poland, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Rumania, the theft of Manchuria, the betrayal of a united Germany and all else.

This is a very curious business and I still can not understand why the "New York Herald-Tribune" permitted Foster to use about 12 columns for such falsehood, without reply or denunciation in similar prominent space.

The Speedup Comes To the Juke Box

Inflationary note: The juke box industry is cutting record playing time from 2½ to 2 minutes.

Now Schubert won't be the only one with an unfinished symphony.

Of course, in some ways, this is a break for consumers: Not only will Frankie-boy's anguish more quickly be ended, but also will Babe Jay that pistol down sooner.

Still, a lot of people had rather they had made juke boxes play softer instead of shorter.

Time was when you got three minutes of music for your nickel. If this keeps up, dance-halls which depend on mechanical music will have to post a sign over their juke-box: "He Who Hesitates Is Lost."

Of course, one can understand the operator's reasons for needing more money. . . . They have to buy a lot of needles and steel is up $6 a ton.

The Distant Drum

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

WASHINGTON—To any sensible American, the devaluation of the French franc must seem as remote and without menace to us as was the eruption of Krakatoa. The events in Paris are regarded with deep alarm, however, in the small circle of men in Washington who understand such things. They are considered likely, in fact, to presage more general and much graver economic troubles, in the way that a distant drum-roll of thunder presages the coming storm.

The immediate practical effects which are most feared are an outbreak of competitive devaluation among the other European currencies, and a simultaneous drying up of the channels of trade. The signs already point that way. The Belgians, for example, are even now known to be considering following the French, with a devaluation of the English franc. And the British, whose position is most seriously jeopardized, are also known to be considering requiring the French to pay in dollars for their more important purchases in areas under British control.

The American treasury, the British treasury and the International Monetary Fund are organizing themselves to avert the worst of these dangers. But while such leaders in the effort as Camille Gutt, the able and courageous manager of the monetary fund, do their best to put a bold face on the situation, they clearly feel no assurance of success.

Source of Main Danger

As usual in monetary crises, the source of the main danger is highly technical. As part of its devaluation plan, the French government has insisted on establishing in Paris a free market for the dollar and other hard currencies. In this market, the dollar is considered likely to sell, initially, for from 300 to 400 franc. At the same time, the French have established the official rate of 214 francs to the dollar at the Bank of France, and they have placed proportional official rates on the other European currencies. Thus the pound sterling, which is officially worth a fraction over $4, will be dealt in by the Bank of France at 862 francs to the pound. But, anyone holding dollars can sell $100 on the free market for 35,000 francs (or thereabouts). And he can use these francs to get over 40 pounds sterling at the Bank of France, instead of the 25 pounds he would have got by changing his dollars for sterling directly.

The real value of the pound is thus undermined, and so will be the real value of every other soft currency in Europe. When confidence in values is thus attacked, hardly any form of currency controls however strict, can prevent flights from the currencies which are endangered. Furthermore, a trader can buy goods in London with his cheap French pounds and sell the same goods in New York for dollars, with a clear profit of over 50 per cent. This kind of unhealthy trading will naturally tend to replace normal commerce, since it will offer a safer, quicker return. And thus the kind of situation may arise which led to the great crisis of the early thirties, that drove the British to take sterling off gold, and was the real cause of putting Hitler in the Reich Chancellory.

Breakdown Feared

These are the reasons, very crudely stated, why both competitive devaluation and a breakdown or normal trade are feared in Europe. These are the reasons, also, why the experts of the International Monetary Fund, and the representatives of the British and American treasuries, have pleaded with the French during recent days at least to abandon the free market feature of their devaluation plan.

Under the circumstances, it is pertinent to note that American leadership has shockingly failed in this vital matter. The French hinted to Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder as long ago as last September that they had something of the sort in mind. They officially informed our treasury of their intentions more than a fortnight ago, long before they let the British in on the secret.

Either the significance of what was afoot was not understood by the American experts, or the American simply failed to make up their minds.

Waiting Patiently for Return of Rationing

From News of Other Years

TEN YEARS AGO

It was Monday, Jan. 31 1938.

Another cold wave swept over Ohio and the rest of the country, replacing a brief respite from the freezing temperatures of the preceding week. The weekend traffic toll was placed at nine in the state.

Mrs. Green Miller, 73, of DeCliff, died at her home in that village.

Mrs. Joseph Stubbs entertained the Searchlight club at the home of Mrs. C. Z. Zachman on South Prospect street.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Carl H. Drake of Glad street.

Six Marion ministers were in Columbus attending the nineteenth annual Ohio Pastors' convention. They were Rev. Carl V. Roop of the First United Brethren church, Rev. Lawrence A. Wood of Trinity Baptist church, Rev. S. L. Cover of the First Church of the Brethren, Rev. J. W. Heminger of Calvary Evangelical church, Rev. Stanley W. Wiant of Wesley M. E. church and Rev. Henry Maag of the Prospect Street M. E. church.

Frank M. Riley, 79, of Richwood, died suddenly while on a trip to Marysville with his son, Guy Riley.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

It was Tuesday, Jan. 31, 1928.

Funeral services were held at Mentone, France, for Vincente Blasco Ibanez, noted Spanish novelist.

Marion was plagued by writers of worthless checks, more than 25 affidavits for arrest on this charge having been filed within a month.

Miss Lucile Ehlers of Hattiesburg, Miss., student at Western College of Women at Oxford, was a weekend guest of Miss Elizabeth Keenan of Wildwood court.

Mrs. Franw S. Keiler and Mrs. C. H. Elliott left for St. Petersburg, Fla.

Miss Garnet Thomasson was hostess to the Ritz bridge club at her home on Olney avenue.

The Lauer Tailors, Prospect basketball team, defeated the Doyle Dry Cleaners of Marion, 49 to 39. Anson of Prospect led in scoring with seven field baskets.

A Good Five-Cent Cigar

By Frank Tripp

OF ALL the botch jobs that could have been inflicted on the people, nothing within the imagination of man could approach the mess that is being made of things for the average household.

Out of a victory which begins to look worth less than the left ear of a wooden Indian comes an exhibition of economic administration that makes sober citizens stomach-sick.

An exhibition of amateur ineptness by job-hugging politicss who are a blot on the party that harbors them. And harbor is the word, but little that they do bears relation to the principles which once distinguished one party from another.

TRIPP

A political party has become a place to get a life job and live off the people, with a nice fat pension to tail off a career of "unselfish public service."

We once had unselfish service and pretty clearly defined lines between party programs and policies. A citizen could work up a lather of enthusiasm over the things for which his party stood. There's little of it now among the rank and file who are trying to make ends meet and paying the fiddlers' bill with 31 cents out of every dollar they get hold of.

"Just be patient; times are tough; we wizards will lead you out," say the wiseacres who are making mincemeat out of peoples' lives and savings.

Inflation, says they; the Communists will get you; rebuild the world; let British Socialists peter away an empire and our four billions with it; give 'em some more; let Russia rob conquered countries blind; we'll replace their loot with another 17 to 22 billions.

A Marshall plan again. We had a Marshall once before He made a classic wisecrack that became immortal. He was Tom Marshall, Hoosier from Indiana. Woodrow Wilson's vice president for two terms, back when we had a Democratic party north of the Mason-Dixon line. His little observation was:

"What this country needs is a good five cent cigar."

Well brother, he hit the jackpot with that one. Nobody remembers what two hour harangue in Congress brought forth this gem of wisdom. Folks just remember that once there was a man in Washington who was able to express what they were thinking. They don't remember another thing he ever said.

If somebody down there now would get off his quiver about impending world disaster long enough to discover that the American people again need a good five cent cigar, the country would begin to believe that he'd heard that one about charity beginning at home.

The folks who are asked to give away their shirts can't get a house to live in. To build one costs more than they can save in two generations. They can't get a lamb chop dinner for less than a half day's work. They can't get a few sheets of plywood to build a hen house or a Chic Sale. A kid's junk yard jalopy costs more than the family sedan that toted him to be christened.

If they've got a house they can't keep it warm. If they do get fuel it costs what they used to pay for 100 proof Bourbon And it ain't temporary say, the big-wigs. It's going to last two or three years, they say — also meat and wheat shortage—and pants too. How comforting!

Boy, we sure have a swell bunch of economists running the show. Bureaus enough to turn the Sahara into a hotel bureaucrats and experts enough to deliver the votes—and nothing much else.

They can't get fuel oil to the East Coast, but a cross-roads guy from way up in York state can go with a tank truck and bring back all you need—at 25 cents a gallon.

We get offered a swell break Forty bucks! To lure the votes of little suckers who don't know that their income tax is the lowest tax they pay. That on top of it are hidden taxes which total 31 cents of every dollar that finally does get into their pay envelope. That's where the inflation is. Nearly one third of the dough we get goes to sweeten the tax collectors' kitty. Manufacturers get stuck worse: And up go prices.

And so the schemers can stay in jobs, to the tune of three millions of them, against 500,000 pre-New Deal. In soft, well paid jobs, to tinker up new ways to spuander the people's money.

Inflation would be cracked; high prices would start down; home building would start up; nest eggs could be saved; there would be plenty to share with those who suffer and there'd be lots for George Marshall's grab bag if the people could get one of Tom Marshall's good five cent cigars.

But it'll never happen with so many noses in the public trough; nor by trying to tax the people into deflation. Taxes and government waste have got to come down first.

The men who bring them a long, long way down will be in office a long, long time.

Tired of Odd Names

Vicar W. A. Gibson of All Saints' church, Wimbledon, England, has told his congregation he is through baptizing children named after racehorses, greyhounds, vegetables and Hollywood film stars.

"The majority of names I take exception to are those borrowed from American film stars," he said. "It is un-English and un-Christian." He did not mention any particular stars.

"Already I have refused to baptize three girls because of ridiculous names," he said. "One father wanted his child named 'Lettuce,' but I persuaded him to accept the good old - fashioned name of 'Mary.'

"The other two names were 'Vickie' and 'Latta.' Goodness knows where the parents had got them."

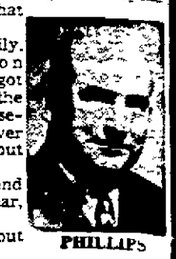
Father and Son Dialogues

"Popper, is thirty-nine billion dollars much?"

"It always has been, but I wouldn't want to be quoted on it today, son."

"Teacher says the President proposes to spend that much in one year and that it's a staggering sum."



PHILLIPS

"Your teacher staggers easily. But at that my opinion wouldn't be any good. I got all mixed up about the value of money back in Roosevelt's first term and have never been able to figure things out since."

"Can a country really spend that much money in one year, popper?"

"It ain't easy, my boy, but we can do it."

* * *

"Popper, why must we send so many billions to Europe?"

"We must help all countries to get out of a big hole."

"I thought we fought the war to get them out of a big hole."

"There is no telling about holes these days, son. Willie Jones is outside yoohooing for you."

* * *

"But you either pull a man out of a hole or you don't, popper, don't you?"

"Not lately. When you pull anybody out of a hole today it becomes a super excavation. Gwan out and play, will ya?"

"Popper, our side won the war to save Europe, didn't it? Then what happened that we have got to rescue it all over again?"

"We forgot to save boxtops or sumpin'. Look! They're having a lovely snowball fight out in the yard."

"When you win a war don't you come out ahead?"

"Who said so?"

"Napoleon."

"What did he know about war? He didn't even have lend-lease, Quebec conference or ERP."

"But he was an expert on war."

"Phooey He didn't even know about interim aid, UN or what is called a deteriorating situation."

* * *

"Popper, when we won the war at Trenton from the British didn't that settle everything? Did we have to lend billions to the British and Hessians to make it good?"

"We have progressed, my son. Today we have got things to a point, where nothing turns out according to the book. Civilization has reached a state where if we win a war we lose and if we lose we are almost as bad off."

"But, popper . .

Beep-Beep To You

By TRUMAN TWILL

These lines are put down after a particularly trying week with an automobile doing its best, no doubt, to survive a long, hard winter—bless it.

If I were an automobile and someone left me stranded in a snowdrift with frost all over my glasses and sensitive parts—left me there in the middle of the night to get snowed on and cursed at by others—then came around the next morning and tried to get clubby, what would I do? Nothing.

Particularly if someone tried to get cute and pour raw gasoline into a hole in my head while warming up my heart with a hot electric-light bulb shoved uncermoniously into my lap and pressed home with a pair of old pants tied around a place where I do not wear pants I'd let the sap see how he liked standing in a snowdrift with frost on his sensitive parts for a couple of hours.

And when he grabbed my buttons and heavy-footed me while I was stiff in the joints, cursing me in three languages, including the Scandinavian, I'd curse back in a low guttural tone even if it took the last erg of energy in my system—because I could be sure that no matter how fast my battery ran down his would be running down faster.

I'd insist on being taken to a hospital, there to have restoratives administered by experts working in a decently warm place and with a little consideration for the aches and pains of a faithful servant that should have been turned out to pasture five years ago And even then I'd be in no great rush to get chummy with a human race that seems to take it for granted an automobile is going to jump at a chance to ram around like crazy in snow and ice up to its knee-action. I'd take my sweet time about convalescing. I would sure run up a big bill.

And furthermore when I had begun to tick again I'd look out for myself in such ways as skittering to the curb out of harm's way when my brakes were applied If I didn't feel like it. I wouldn't hit on all cylinders either. I'd save a couple for the rainy days when instead of being left in a snowdrift the jughead in charge of me was going to abandon me in puddles and mudholes.

For spite I'd crack a few of my windows for no apparent reason, let the air out of my tires overnight and develop death rattles to scare you-know-who into taking me back to the hospital every whipstitch. I'd five-dollar the bloke to death, and in between times I'd lose all my oil and spit out cupfuls of gasoline selling at the same price as bootleg licker during the depression when I was just a young thing full of snap and vigor.

All of which is now being done, with worse to come—and whoever thinks an aged automobile isn't a prima donna with a nasty spirit of getting even for being abused doesn't know the mechanical monster that has been getting even with this correspondent for the last few days—bless it for running at all.

A Sermonette

By REV. ROBERT A. MAUGANS

Pastor of Fite Memorial Baptist Church

Romans 13:11-12: "And that knowing the time, that now it is time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light."

The scriptures tell us that Jesus rebuked the men of His day because they could forecast the weather but they failed to determine the signs of the times. Can we?

There are many who tell us that the hands of God's clock have long since passed from the eleventh hour and that they are rapidly approaching the hour of midnight. To say that the condition of our day are such as to cause one to believe that the hour of the discerning hand of God to work has not too far removed.

The Roman Empire of old, with its mighty conquests have come and gone. We have grown in wealth, power and influence, but we are filled with fear. Since the close of the last century a sensual type of society has been released from our colleges and universities encouraging a freedom in sin which has lowered our standard of righteousness to the level of the beast. Encouraged by the modern day movies, picture magazines and other forms of lewed entertainment, we find ourselves burdened by sin and debauchery. We are skilful but ignorant—we have neighbors but not neighborliness.

We have plenty, for what? In 1946 America had $8,700,000 000 spend for whisky, beer and wine. This fabulous sum was enough to build 1,242,950 new homes or 87,000 rural schools. The amount monies involved in gambling in 1945 reached the staggering sum of $10,000,000,000. It has been estimated that there were 16 murders every day in our nation. Every 20 seconds some part of our land is involved in a serious crime. According to J. Edgar Hoover we are facing a crime of 6,000,000 criminals. Juvenile delinquency has risen so that the age of 17 is the accustomed age of the offenders.

Certainly, the night of sin is far spent. The patience of God with man will expire, as in the days of Noah. Then His horrible wrath will be outpoured upon the nations which are persistently trampling under foot the blood of the only begotten Son of God, who died and arose again, that we might be saved from the wrath to come.

In this day of so great uncertainties, doubt, and skepticism, there are some things, like the lighthouse built upon the rocks, which remaineth sure.

It Never Faileth. The Bible remaineth sure. (Mark 13:31).

I Am the One. "All have sinned and come short of the glory of God." (Romans 3:23).

Peace! Oh That I Might Find It. "But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt. There is no peace, saieth my God, to the wicked." (Isaiah 57:20-21).

"Being justified by faith, we have peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Romans 5:1).

It Is a Gift Too. "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him shuld not perish, but have everlasting life." (John 3:16).

SAYS MEAT SHORTAGE REPORTS UNFOUNDED

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 — The American Meat Institute declared today fears of a serious meat shortage are unfounded.

R. J. Eggert, associate director of the institute's marketing department, told a senate banking subcommittee:

"The supply of meat per person next spring and summer will be about one-half an ounce less than last year, but there will be more meat per person during this period than before the war."

The agriculture department has forecast a severe shortage will develop in the spring and grow worse during the summer.

The subcommittee is considering a bill by Senator Flanders (R-Vt) which would let the government get ready for meat rationing. It would be up to congress to decide whether to put the program into effect later.

"Meat rationing will not work, but would only create black markets and discourage production so that the supply of meat into 1949 would be even shorter," Eggert said in his prepared statement.

As an alternative, he suggested consumers "be more moderate in their demands and exercise restraints." He added:

"If all of us do this, there will be enough meat at prices most people consider reasonable."

The Flanders bill appears to have little chance in congress. Senator Capehart (R-Ind) told reporters he has decided to vote against it in the subcommittee.

That makes two of the five members publicly against it, two for it. The fifth, without saying how he will vote, has commented that rationing of meat alone would be "utterly futile."

Plan Offers Sturdy and Compact Studio Home Available at Low Cost

YOUR HOME TODAY and TOMORROW

By W. Wadsworth Wood

The sturdy and compact house illustrated, is typical of the present-day trend toward simplicity; combined with livability. Most of the best architectural effort is aimed at producing a small house which is economical to build, easy to run without help, and which presents a minimum of upkeep.

The house shown is composed of four walls and a shed-type roof. It represents the very minimum in construction effort and cost. The interior offers a large living room or studio, with two built-in bunks, excellent lighting arrangement, and a generous fireplace which may be supplemented by a small central heating plant located below floor level.

The massive chimney shown may be laid up on field-stone, rough rock, native-stone, or brick; or, as an economy feature, it may be simply provided for and built over several months in easy stages. In this type of construction there is no hurry about details or certain parts of the house as a whole.

The expensive-looking picture-window in the front of this house is provided by crossing the ordinary wall studs with "spacers" of two-by-fours; setting in 16-inch panes of ordinary window glass, and securing them in place with standard quarter-inch, quarter-round moulding. Floor-to-ceiling picture-windows or wall-windows, can cost from $300 to $500; but if you are building yourself and following the suggestions made here, you can have one as shown for $30.

The reader might note that the small house or studio shown can very easily be built in the rough, with unfinished interior walls and rough floors to be finished off at the owner's leisure.

Any good, plain carpenter can erect the house shown without further details or building plans.

Marion Co. To Have Homemakers Chorus

A Homemakers chorus, made up of women throughout the county, will be organized Monday afternoon at the Y. M. C. A., it was announced today by Miss Mary Faye McMillen, county home demonstration agent. The meeting will be held in the assembly room at 2 p. m. and is open to all women throughout the county interested in singing with others and in the advancement of music. A practice session will be held at the first meeting.

Mrs. Carl Bailey of Martel, who has taught music in the schools in the county and is now a part-time instructor in the Morral school, will direct the chorus. It is planned to have the chorus ready for an appearance on the Achievement Day program on March 23, Miss McMillen said today.

FIRST AID TO AILING HOUSE

—By ROGER C. WHITMAN—

Dampness, Odor in Basement

Q. The basement of the house we have moved into is about seven feet deep and has a terrible odor of dampness, and some of the things get moldy. Around the edge of the floor it gets wet with moisture. Could we paint that with something? How can we correct these conditions?

A. If there is actual leakage, the cracked places should be repaired, and preferably by a mason. If the trouble is from condensation only, you may be able to check the dampness by running a low fire in your heater, providing more ventilation, putting in a device for calcium chloride and by running one of two electric fans. The odor of mold can be dissipated by spraying all surfaces with a mildew-proofing prepartation, on sale in many stores in the large cities. But you may need to check up on the possibility of rotting sills or other decayed woodwork, which may be contributing to the odor. Do not leave your clothing or other possessions in the cellar, if they might be damaged by the dampness.

Leak in Boiler

Q. We recently had a leak fixed in our boiler. The man said he used only flax seed. However, whenever we "bleed" the radiators or put water in the open tank there is a terrible odor. Is there any way of getting rid of this odor?

A. Flax has a naturally bad odor. I advise you to drain the boiler and clean it out with a boiler cleaning compound. You then can use one of the compounds made for stopping leaks in boilers. Read the directions before using the compound. But you probably will need to plan for a new boiler or a new section in the near future.

Rough Plaster Over Old

Q. We had rough plaster put on over old plaster two years ago, and now it is beginning to crack. How can we remedy this condition?

A. If the plaster is in very bad condition, it would seem useless to fill the cracks. It might be better to cover the defective plaster with a good wallboard, putting it up according to the manufacturer's instructions, taking special care with the joints between the sheets. If you wish to try patching the cracks, get patching plaster and follow the directions for use. Many and fine hair-line cracks can be filled by brushing with a mixture of 3 parts boiled linseed oil and 1 part turpentine, or for somewhat wider cracks with white lead thinned with turpentine to a thinnish paste. Rub this on with a cloth to force it into the cracks and wipe off excess from the surface.

Laying Asphalt Tile

Q. I am building a summer cottage out of cinder blocks and intend to put asphalt tile on the concrete floor. Would it be possible to damp-proof this floor by painting a coat of asphalt tar on it? I intend to put a layer of felt on before laying the tile. Would the felt stick to the coat of asphalt tar?

A. Asphalt tile should be laid in a mastic cement on a concrete floor that is dry, clean and free of paint or any other kind of finish.

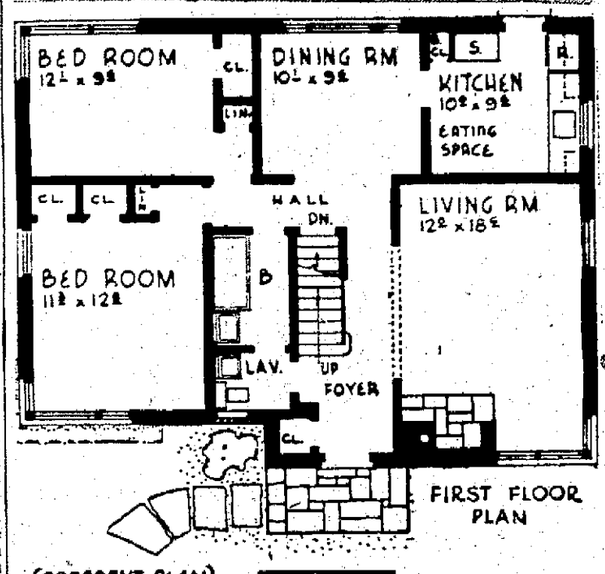
HOMES FOR AMERICANS



By The Associated Press

A lot of living in a small area is packed into this plan by Rudolph A. Matern & Associates, architects, of 90-04 161st street, Jamaica 2, L. I., N. Y. The house covers an area of 1,085 square feet and contains 21,375 cubic feet with basement. In addition to the upstairs bath, the plan features a combination lavatory and bath that provides a powder room off the entrance foyer. The second floor can be left unfinished for future expansion. Corner windows and whitewashed brick exterior are suggested.

The trend in the average consumption of meat by the people of the U. S. has been downward for the last 30 years.

SEES RECESSION COMING

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31—The business editor of the New York Times looks for a recession in the spring. Editor Charles F. Hughes made that prediction yesterday at an advertising conference sponsored by the Ohio State university college of commerce. He cited tightening bank credit, competitive imports, drop in retail sales unit volume and reduced capital goods expansion as reasons.

City families in the Pacific and North Atlantic regions of the States are exceptionally large consumers of milk.

63rd Annual Edition Of World Almanac Out

The new World Almanac and Book of Facts, now in its 63rd year of publication, is on the book shelves. The current issue of 912 pages is closely packed with essential information such as is frequently called for by statesmen, busines executives, teachers, editors and the plain citizens who want to know about the United States and foreign countries.

The book contains enough miscellaneous information to make a field day for quiz programs, arguments among old grads and battles around the stove of the country store, together with specific authoritative facts and figures. In it are found the substance of the Marshall Plan, the record of the United Nations, the status of the atomic bomb, the records of manufacturing industries and labor and many other pertinent and authoritative facts.

For years the World Almanac has been the leading authority on sports records. It is likely that no section of the book is more frequently consulted for results, past performances, accomplishments of individual players, than that devoted to baseball, football, track and field events, bowling and other sports.

The book is published by the New York World-Telegram and is edited by E. Eastman Irvine and a staff of experts who are on duty the year around.

Global Scene

By DeWitt Mackenzie

...the great Gandhi dead at the hand of an assassin, observers are anxiously seeking the significance of this shocking event. Not to the Indian peninsula's several hundred millions but to the world at large—for what affects the sub-continent in a major way must also affect other nations.

I was in Atlanta, Ga., when the startling news of the Mahatma's death broke, and for hours I watched maintained an endless vigil on the streets: "Gandhi Assassinated!" "Gandhi Assassinated!" Since we had a branch of the Gandhi family in Delhi, on half a dozen occasions I had seen Atlanta was deeply moved. So were the citizens of other communities throughout the land, I suppose.

MACKENZIE

Our first thought of course is that the Mahatma's murder has created a terrible threat to the already troubled peace of the country, for it comes at a moment when politico-religious feelings are running high. It could cause a mighty explosion to precipitate the most terrible spiritual conflict of history. The fact that it was one of India's own people—a Hindu—who slew him may serve to keep passions in hand—but unhappily that doesn't necessarily follow, as witness the killing which already has taken place in Bombay. Bitterness is strong between the Hindus and the Moslems in many areas, and each side is quick to charge misfortunes against the other. So while hoping for the best, we mustn't dismiss the possibilities of more bloodshed.

THE LONDON DAILY Express comments: "How truly India stands on the brink of fearful perils." And the London Daily Mail says: "Deprived of their pilot, the Indian government now are faced with a crisis which excels by far anything that they have yet had to cope with in their short but lurid history."

Still the fact that Gandhi died, as he would have wished to die, while at prayer, will have a strong influence on his followers, and apropos of this thought British Prime Minister Atlee says:

"I am certain his spirit will continue to animate his fellow countrymen and will plead for peace and concord."

That would seem to be a fair appraisal. Our chief concern is whether the grief of his people may overwhelm them in its first fierce rush and cause them to violate the peace to which he devoted his life.

SO MUCH FOR THE dangerous present. But what of the future? It is difficult to analyze the position dispassionately, for our troubled world could ill afford to lose this great and saintly man. However, taking it by and large, the 78 year old Gandhi had performed the task which fate had assigned him. That was truly herculean, for it included these achievements:

1. His great social labors among his people in South Africa—a work so notable that it evoked tribute from none other than Tolstoy himself.

2. The foremost part in the winning of independence for India.

3. The moral and spiritual rehabilitation of untold millions of Indians.

4. Living what he taught (and he told me that the greatest inspiration of his life came from Christ's sermon on the Mount) he did much to better the condition of the world's most tragic people — India's 60,000,000 untouchables. These are folk so lowly that their plight in many ways is worse than that of the gaunt native dogs from which they take the name of pariah—worse because they live longer and suffer mental tortures.

And so perhaps, hard though it is to say, the Mahatma's martyrdom may be the greatest final contribution which he could make to the world, for it will immortalize his deeds and teachings.

Ohio Bell Asks First Rate Hike in 24 Years

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, Jan. 31—A 24-year-period without rate increases may be ended by the Ohio Bell Telephone Co. after the firm files a request with the state public utilities commisison Monday asking average hikes of nine per cent.

The present firm, formed in 1921 by consolidation of Ohio Bell and the Ohio State Telephone Co., made its last request for a rate increase in 1924, and made "substantial" rate reductions in 1937.

New rates would be effective at the company's 170 exchanges.

Another application for increased rates by the Ohio Associated Telephone Co., of Marion operating 32 exchanges in the New Philadelphia area, now is being studied by the P.U.C.O.

TWO SENT TO PRISON

Bucyrus Kiwanis Hears State Highway Officials

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS — Bucyrus' newly formed Kiwanis club at the dinner meeting at the Hotel Weaver Tuesday night heard talks by three officials of the State Highway department which touched upon improvements in and near Bucyrus as well as the general highway picture for the next year.

Officials advised the club that the possibility of an underpass in Bucyrus at the Pennsylvania-West Mansfield street crossing was slight although the need is recognized. Officials were more encouraging, however, on other local projects and promised action in the spring on the resurfacing of Hopley avenue as well as action in the near future in replacement of the North Sandusky avenue bridge over Sandusky river.

The Kiwanians will observe Charter night Tuesday when state and national officers are expected to be present.

Roving Reports

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK

THE headlines scream:

"Man shoots wife, slays lover."

"Rich hubby trapped in love nest with blonde."

"High-living bank cashier flees with $85,000."

"War looms in Balkan friction."

And some readers get the idea that there is little in life except chaos and disorder. They overlook the fact that it would be a terrible world indeed if it became a matter of page one news every time someone found a man living a good life.

Old Diogenes didn't need a lantern to find an honest man. All he needed was to wipe the windshield of his own cynicism.

Hal Boyle

The world is full of people who are basically good. If it weren't, the bad ones would lock up the good ones and murder and mayhem would be about as newsworthy as a scratched finger is today.

Philanthropy is as natural to man as hunger or toenails or sleep. If the ordinary man is only a two-bit Andrew Carnegie in the field of giving—why, it's because that's the best he can do. A newspaper doesn't print all the neighborly acts of kindness and anonymous deeds of good will that go on in its community every day because—among other reasons — there simply wouldn't be space for them.

But occasionally a story comes along illustrating the age-old goodness of people that is so dramatic it becomes news.

And such is the story of 15-year-old Marilyn Losby of St. Paul, Minn., and the townspeople who helped her to live.

Marilyn suffered from a rare disease called "coarctation of the aorta." This is an ailment which constricts the main arterial trunk line. Seeking to force the blood through, the heart becomes enlarged. Unable to carry on, it surrenders to death.

THE GIRL WAS TOLD only two doctors in the United States could operate and cure her. One was a surgeon in the Children's hospital in Boston. He agreed to perform the delicate operation—which consists of removing the small constricted section of the artery and sewing the two loose ends together again.

But Marilyn and her widowed mother lacked money.

Marilyn went to work as a baby sitter. But the fund grew slowly, and each month of delay made her risk greater.

Then Paul Light, a columnist on the St. Paul Pioneer Press, learned of her case and published the facts.

"I don't know what's to be done about it," he told his readers. "I've merely given you the story. I thought it might interest you."

IT DID. BY NINE o'clock next morning more than $2,000 for the operation had been contributed. The Elks lodge wanted to assume the whole costs. A trust fund was established, and Paul Light wrote later:

"The hardest part of our job was shutting off donation. I could easily have collected $10,000."

Marilyn went to Boston. She needed the courage she brought with her. For one so nearly grown it was a particularly difficult operation. It took five hours.

But she is alive and well today, one of forty similar patients saved at the Childen's Hospital by the technique employed there.

She owes her life to unknown friends who needed only to hear of her plight to come forward with help.

And they weren't even asking for first call on Marilyn's services as a baby sitter.

Peterson, Paul Downend, Estella Pfleiderer, Mrs. Harry Barrett and E. B. Hagaman. A case work committee consisting of J. E. Faulkner, D. C. Baer and H. R. Kiess was named.

Julina Gardner, northwest area field secretary for the Ohio Society for Crippled Children assisted in setting up the constitution and by-laws. Aim of the organization is to provide greater opportunities for physically handicapped children and adults through physical care and treatment, special education, recreation and job placement.

Memoirs of Cordell Hull

ing the passage of the Smoot-Hawley high-tariff act. Nor had their protests been confined to words. Goaded by what they regarded as almost an embargo keeping out their exports to the United States, they retaliated in kind.

WHEN I RETURNED from Montevideo I dived in on congress preparatory to getting trade agreements legislation offered and passed. By the end of February, 1934, we had completed our draft of the trade agreements bill. Ironically, our opponent Peek proved of material aid to us. The original draft was too long and complicated. "Make the bill only two or three pages long and it will stand a better chance," Peek suggested. We followed his idea. He was right.

The bill passed the house of representatives March 20 by a vote of 274 to 111. The bill passed the senate on June 4 by a vote of 57 to 33. In both house and senate we were aided by the severe reaction of public opinion against the Smooth-Hawley Act.

At 9:15 on the night of June 12 I watched the President sign our bill in the White House. Each stroke of the pen seemed to write a message of gladness on my heart. My fight of many long years for the reciprocal trade policy and the lowering of trade barriers was won.

What was the trade agreements act? It has been my experience in congress and in the state department that the general public grasps with much more ease and interest many of the broad political actions of our government in foreign affairs than it does the economic actions. It is not too difficult to understand the meaning of a diplomatic protest, a political treaty, the withdrawal of an ambassador, or the recognition of a new government. It is indeed difficult to understand the interaction of foreign commerce, tariffs, currency exchange and debts.

THE TRADE AGREEMENTS Act in itself was simple. Basically it contained three main points: Agreements could be negotiated without their having to be submitted to congress. Tariffs could be reduced by as much as one half, but only if we gained corresponding concessions from other countries. Reductions applied to all countries that did not discriminate against us.

The first two points require little explanation. The third has been the subject of much debate. This is the so-called unconditional most-favored-nation clause. The phrase is not of the happiest. It gives an impression of getting or giving favored or special treatment. It merely means: "I won't treat you any worse than the person I treat best of all, provided you don't treat me any worse the person you treat the best of all."

As for tariff reductions, it simply meant that, when he reduced the tariff rates on certain articles imported from Country A, we likewise reduced them on the same articles coming in from countries B to Z—provided countries B to Z gave our exports to them as low rates of duty and as much freedom from restrictions as they gave any other country. If Country B put higher rates of duty or more restrictions on our products than on those coming in to her from any other country, then B's exports to us would still have to pay the high Smoot-Hawley rates—the highest in American history.

IN PRACTICE we applied the most-favored nation principle in its conditional form until 1923. That means that, when we made a tariff treaty with Country A, we did not apply our tariff reductions to Countries B to Z unless countries B to Z agreed to give us concessions equivalent to those given us by Country A. Secretary of State Hughes, under President Harding, began to apply the principle in its unconditional form.

The conditional form had proved a failure. Why? Trade between any two countries is virtually never the same, in products or quantity, as between one of them and some other country. If we make tariff reductions to Country A in exchange for tariff reductions by Country A, it is difficult to say exactly what Country A gave us in exchange for any one reduction. We can not, therefore, logically go to Country B and say, "We will give you what reductions we gave A if you give us what reductions A gave us." Country B may not be interested in the products dealt with in our agreement with A. This system also means an interminable series of negotiations with many countries.

Hence it was that the trade agreements act specifically stated that the unconditional policy should apply. But people have argued that we were thereby giving away something for nothing. They would say, "You reduced our tariffs on imports of horses, seed potatoes and whisky from Country A, and you got reductions from Country A on our exports of automobiles, wheat and lard. That's fine! And then you go and automatically give Countries B to Z the same reductions you gave A—and you don't get anything in exchange. That's terrible!"

BUT THE FACT IS, we got a great deal in exchange. Countries B to Z get the same reductions we granted A only if they are not discriminating against us. B might be applying its lowest duties only toward Y and Z. But if B wanted to benefit from our reductions she had to give us the same duties she was extending to Y and Z. The use of the term unconditional most-favored-nation is therefore somewhat misleading. Other nations get our tariff reductions not unconditionally but on condition that they grant us equality of treatment.

In actual practice this principle has meant scores of millions of dollars to American exporters.

During the first two years of the trade agreements, our exports safeguarded from discrimination because of the equality of treatment we received from other countries were valued at $265,000,000.

Other persons have argued that extending tariff reductions to other countries in addition to the one with which we sign a trade agreement would bring in a flood of imports. They say, "Reducing the duty on shoes imported from Country A may be all right. But if B to Z send shoes in to us under the same duty we'll be swamped."

The answer is that Countries B to Z do not all manufacture shoes for export. Perhaps only one or two do, and the probability is that they are smaller exporters than Country A.

IF THE REDUCTION in duty we granted to A were such as not to injure our own producers with whom A was the principal competitor, it was highly unlikely that our producers would suffer injury from the competition of importations from Countries B or C, who were secondary sources of supply.

It is a fact that virtually all countries exporting to us have one or a few articles of which they are the predominant exporters. They are best adapted, through climate, inherited skill or location of raw materials, to make us grow these products better or more cheaply than other countries.

Therefore, in negotiating the trade agreements, we paid special attention to reducing the tariffs on such products, while ignoring other products of which they were not predominant exporters to us. In this way we could get the maximum tariff concessions for our own exports to Country A by concentrating on the imports from Country A in which A had her largest stake. The products we ignored with regard to A could be taken up in the negotiations with the other countries which were the predominant exporters of them. This became known as the "principal supplier" approach.

Since 1916 I had been arguing that economic warfare fertilized the growth of political war and that nondiscrimination in trade lessened the likelihood of war. The trade agreements act was passed in 1934, however, and war came in Africa the next year, in Asia three years later and in Europe five years later. Someone might therefore say, "You see, trade agreements could not prevent war."

I, OF COURSE, never claimed that trade agreements would be an absolute panacea against war. Moreover, by the time the trade agreements act was passed, Hitler had been in power a year and a half and was furiously arming, Mussolini had been in power nearly 12 years and was planning the Ethiopian war, and Japan had been in Manchuria nearly three years and was getting ready to withdraw from the naval limitations treaty. These nations had no use for the liberal commerce of trade agreements, for they were already transforming their commerce to the needs of war. If, as I urged in my speeches during the First World war, something like the trade agreements act could have been passed instead of the Fordney-McCumber act of 1922 and other nations had seen fit to follow suit at once, the story might have been difference.

When I was a boy on the farm in Tennessee, we had two neighbors—I'll call them Jenkins and Jones—who were enemies of each other. For many years there had been bad feeling between them—I don't know why—and when they met on the road or in town or at church, they stared at each other coldly and didn't speak.

Then one of Jenkins' mules went lame in the spring just when Jenkins needed him most for plowing. At the same time Jones ran short of corn for his hogs. Now it so happened that Jones was through with his own plowing and had a mule to spare, and Jenkins had a bin filled with corn. A friendly third party brought the two men together, and Jones let Jenkins use his mule in exchange for corn for the hogs.

AS A RESULT, it wasn't long before the two old enemies were the best of friends. A commonsense trade and ordinary neighborliness had made them aware of their economic need of each other and brought them peace.

Yes, war did come, despite the trade agreements. But it is a fact that war did not break out between the United States and any country with which we had been able to negotiate a trade agreement. It is also a fact that, with very few exceptions, the countries with which we signed trade agreements joined together in resisting the Axis. The political line-up followed the economic line-up.

OBJECTS TO STATE BUYING FOREST LAND

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 31—Some members of the Ohio Forestry association don't like the idea of the state buying up more forest land.

One of the chief objectors is a Cleveland attorney, Horatio Ford, who had this to say yesterday at the organization's annual meeting:

"We in Ohio believe government should not be in any business that private enterprise can take care of."

He made the statement during a discussion of "The Pack Foundation Report" on conservation of Ohio forests.

The report recommended "the acquisition and development of a system of state forests and state forest parks, now well initiated, should be greatly enlarged and steadily continued with an objective of at least 600,000 acres in 20 years."

Ford said: "The program to buy 25,000 acres a year is going to mess up the market for individual citizens desiring to acquire forest lands."

ENGINEER'S OFFICE SHOWS BALANCE AT END OF YEAR

The county engineer's office operated during 1947 at a figure substantially below the amount appropriated for it at the beginning of the year, according to the annual report of County Engineer Walter W. Johnson, to the county commissioners.

A total of $314,086.77 was appriated for operating the engineer's department and for work under its supervision. The expenditures for the year totaled $232,948.81, leaving an unspent balance of $31,137.96.

A cash balance of $118,770.63 to the credit of the engineer's account is on hand as certified by the county auditor Jan. 1, 1948. It represents an accumulation of unspent balances during the war years added to the balances which have accrued since the war.

Proposes Executives Be Lent to Government

By The Associated Press

BOSTON, Jan. 31—Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall Friday proposed that business, labor and farm organizations lend their 'most promising young executives" to the government to fill important administrative posts.

Royall made the proposal in a speech prepared for delivery before the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Citing the unwillingness of top business executives to serve at present government salaries, Royall said the problem "is in no way a partisan or political matter."

"I would like to see corporations, unions and farm organizations make available to the government their most promising young executives for a reasonable period of service," Royall declared.

Love's Perilous Path

By ADELE GARRISON

I NEVER shall understand how Joe, the "demon driver" of one of my father's armored cars, managed to deliver Dicky and me safely at the Underwood home. But we arrived at their doorstep, marvelously intact and convinced that Joe had shaken off any possible pursuit.

"Nobody on the street," Joe said as he stopped. "The Chief's seeing to that. If anybody that lives, or has business here has to come into the street, a cop strolls along just for company."

His voice was filled with the mirthful admiration which all of my father's associates and henchmen have for his meticulous attention to necessary—in so many cases, life-saving—details. He had not finished speaking when a shadow, at the Underwood entrance door, drifted across the sidewalk and materialized into another of my father's guards.

"Okay?" he asked Joe.

"Double okay." Joe told him, and the other man inside the car opened the door for us. As we climbed out, Joe spoke insisently to me.

"Tell your father, please, Mrs. Graham," he said, "that I'll be waiting where he said.

I stopped myself just in time from voicing an imitative "okay," turning it instead into a swiftly spoken, "Thank you, Joe. I'll tell him as soon as I see him."

"Okay. Thanks a million," Joe said as he started the car again, and Dicky and I followed the guard up the steps, waiting while he gave a signaling knock on the door.

Harry Underwood opened the door, and I noticed that he, too, did not undo the night chain until he had satisfied himself of our identity. Then he threw it open wide.

"Welcome to the castle," he said "And am I ever glad you're here! The Chief's having humming birds all over his insides, although outwardly he's as calm as a real June day—you know 'what is so rare?' ta-ta-ta."

"We came as quickly as we could," I told him, defensively.

"Oh! He knows that, knows what held you up, and everything. He isn't blaming anybody. But you ought to know how he always is when you're out in the armored car on one of his errands. He asks you to do the things for him, because he's a patriot with a one track mind, who doesn't consider anything but the job he has in front of him. But he's crucified every time you're on one of his jobs, even though he knows you're not in any real danger."

"I'm glad he realizes that," Dicky said dryly. "It's a great comfort to me."

"Dicky!" I protested, and Harry Underwood clapped him between the shoulders.

"Just because you were born an anointed ass doesn't mean you have to spend the rest of your life braying," he said, and when my husband's lips twitched, I knew that at least his worry about me had been eased by his old friend's crudely phrased common sense.

"All right, I'll play along," Dicky said, and then I noticed that Harry Underwood was looking at us both a bit oddly, as if hesitant to say what next was in his mind.

"Look here!" he said in muted tones, but sounding the hackneyed phrase flippantly, "did 'K.' put you wise to the Chief's latest brain wave?"

"No," I answered. "He asked me to tell Father that he didn't have time to tell us anything on account of finding those men in the corridor. He said that Father would explain."

"There's no question about that," Harry Underwood said with a grin. "He'll have to. He has Exhibit A parked in the library with Lil mounting guard over it.

"But here's something you ought to know," he went on swiftly with a glance at the inner door to the Underwood living room. "When you see Exhibit A, you're going to be in for a bit of a shock. Lil and I got it right between the eyebrows, and she said I ought to prepare you."

He had no chance to say anything more, for the door opened behind us, and my father's voice spoke peremptorily.

"What—" he began. Then he saw me, and coming forward, swept me into a warm embrace.

"I'm so glad you're here, my darling," he said softly, and drew me into the living room, while I tried to shake off the intangible uneasiness which Harry Underwood's warning had given me.

IRISH BLAST COLUMBUS ST. MARY; PREXIES LOSE TO WEST

Schuler Counts 23 Points To Lead Locals To 13th Victory

By BILL DIEM

A smooth-running St. Mary cage machine, like a power shovel scooping up a chunk of earth, last night reached out and swept up its thirteenth win of the season and its second over invading Columbus St. Mary, 68-39, on the Edison Junior High basketball court.

It was St. Mary's eighth victory in a row, and they were never pressed in taking it.

The Irish may have a rockier row to hoe next Tuesday, however, when Marion county champions, Pleasant, invades the Edison Junior High gym for a tussle with St. Mary.

Lead but Once

The Columbus Rams had the lead but once, when Don Kaiser and Gene Demarest tallied three points after John Baldauf opened the scoring with a fielder in the early minutes of the game. After that fleeting moment, the Irish poured it on and led at the end of the quarter, 22-5, widening the gap as the game progressed.

Dick Schuler counted 23 points in pacing the Irish, and Johnny Baldauf meshed 19—all but the odd point on field goals.

But it remained for substitute forward Corky Cusick to set a record. In the final period when the Irish were ahead, 64-39, he dropped in a set shot that broke the season's record for the highest number of points scored in one game. Substitute forward Bill Merchant then added another fielder to push the total even higher.

Schuler's 16-game total now stands at 288 points—an average of nearly 18 per game.

Johnny Baldauf recaptured the lead for the Irish after the brief moment it was enjoyed by the Rams, and sent in two more field goals and a charity toss before the quarter was out, counting nine points in all in that his best quarter. Guard Dan Smith stole the ball and raced down for a layup, and counted another fielder in the St. Mary first-quarter onslaught; Bob Stuber collected four points, and Dick Schuler five to practically wrap up the win in the initial period.

Schuler Hits Stride

Schuler hit his stride in the second period, netting seven points. The Irish led at halftime, 35-14, and at the three-quarter mark, 54-26.

Center Dick Drake, plagued with a cold the last two days, was below par in scoring. He netted a pair of fielders, one each in the second and third quarters.

Dan Smith enjoyed a hot night, swishing 10 points. Stuber counted six and Merchant four.

Lanky, six-foot-seven, Don Kalser, and forward Gene Demarest paced the invaders with 13 and 14 points. The Rams played their best in the last two stanzas, but never quite outscored the Irish in any frame.

The Irish Reserves made it 14 wins in 15 starts by blasting the young Rams, 45-25. Bill Merchant led the attack with 24 points, while Jim Cusick meshed 10.

Smashed Fingers Don't Handicap Don Winters

It takes a mighty good eye and a steady hand to beat 200 in bowling.

Last night Don Winters of 925 Woodrow avenue not only bowled three over 200-games, but he set an all-time high series record at the Palace Recreation, and not only that, he did it with two banged-up fingers.

Winters bowled a 234-254-210 series good for a 698 and a new record, although two fingers of his bowling hand were smashed yesterday while at work as a machinist for the Osgood Co.

He was bowling for Osgood in the Commercial league against The Marion Star team. Osgood won all three games.

Said Winters, "Next week I'm going to smash my whole hand"

NORWAY, SWEDEN WIN GOLD MEDALS

Take 1st Awards in Olympic Winter Games. . .

By The Associated Press

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Jan. 31 — Norway and Sweden won the first gold medals in the dissention-plagued fifth winter Olympics today as the bitter hockey war continued to rage.

Despite an International Olympic committee order cancelling the sport, the hockey tournament continued and the Amateur Hockey Association team of America, beaten in its opening start yesterday, swamped Poland, 23 to 4.

Twenty-one year-old Finn Helgesen of Oslo, Norway, captured the 500-meter (547 yards) speed skating title in 43.1 seconds, cracking the Olympic mark by three-tenth of a second.

Two United States skaters—Robert Fitzgerald and Kennth Bartholomew, both of Minneapolis — also bettered the record of :43.4 in tieing Thomas Byberg of Norway for second place. Their time was :43.2.

Sweden's Martin Lundstroem won the gruelling 18-kilometer (a little more than 10 miles) cross country ski race in one hour, 13 minutes and 50 seconds.

A 48-year-old London refrigerator dealer, R. E. A. Bott, captured the handicap event in suicidal Cresta bobsled run with a mark of 2 minutes, 58.8 seconds for three courses down the 1,320-yard track.

MT. GILEAD Nite college, like the tiny kingbird, delights in chasing big foes...Three weeks ago, the Nitehawks met the Ohio State Jayvees in the preliminary basketball game of the Buckeye-Pitt clash...The Ohio Staters were an average 4½ inches per man taller than the invading Nitehawks, but Mt. Gilead chased them even if they didn't catch up ...The score ended, Ohio State, 60, Mt. Gilead, 17, and even at that, the Staters were disappointed ...As one of them remarked, "we were so much taller than that scrappy bunch that we looked silly scoring only 60 points."... Said Jayvee guard Dick Van Schoik, "I lost my starting berth because I only scored six points during the ten minutes I was in the game."...Tonight, the Nitehawks and State's Jayvees meet again—on the Mt. Gilead court... Nitehawk coach D. B. Noble hopes his cagers come a little nearer tonight. At the Columbus coliseum "it was just too much 'big'—too big a crowd, too big a floor, and too many big players."

ON THE NITEHAWK squad are brothers Harold and Garold Davis of Marengo; Pete Campbell, Phil Dumbaugh, and Bob Lancaster of Mt. Gilead; Donald Halt and Colby Van Atta of Edison; Don Seiter of Iberia, and Merle Smith of Cardington...They'll meet Bliss college Feb. 4 in a postponed game originally scheduled last Saturday night...And on Feb. 14, they'll hold a basketball tournament on the Mt. Gilead floor. Nite college will play the Chillicothe branch of Ohio university, Bliss college will play Wilberforce, and the winners will play for the championship at 10 p. m. the same evening.

Hot Columbus West Cowboys Humble Harding Five, 63-45

By BILL MURPHY

Harding's Presidents and Vice Presidents both took a shellacking last night in their basketball games with the high riding Cowboys of Columbus West. The Presidents got branded 63 to 45 and the Reserves by a 24 to 20 count.

The Westerners, in handing the Prexies their seventh defeat, were just too classy for the local boys as they connected with uncanny accuracy on both field goals and foul throws.

Dick Riddle zipped the meshes most often for the Prexies as he took scoring honors for the Harding five with 15 markers. Jim Rea was next best with 10 tallies, followed by Merle Daum — up from the Reserves—with seven points. While for West, Paul Theisen was high man with a 24 point total and Jack Thrush was second with nine.

Speakman Opens

Starting the first period, Don Speakman opened for the Columbus combine with a free toss which was immediately followed by one from Dick Riddle for Harding. Speakman then dropped a pivot shot from the foul circle and Theisen followed with two gift shots before Riddle hit on a one-hander from outside the foul circle for the Prexies. The play kept about even for the remainder of the quarter and ended with a two-pointer by Jim Coss, making the score read, West 17, Harding 12.

In the fateful second quarter the Prexies slumped badly, and were outscored 15 to 7 as the Columbusites completely dominated the play and the teams took their half-time rest with West leading 32-19.

Coss started the scoring in the second half with a successful charity toss. West followed with a fielder, while Daum and Riddle got two quickies, good for four points, as they cut the Columbus team's lead to 10. Points were equally distributed throughout the quarter, each team hitting for 14 counters.

Play Even

Fourth quarter play was almost even as the teams repeated their first period scoring. The Prexies marked 12 points and West racked 17. By comparison of scores, West was four points better last night in humbling Harding, 63-45, than they were earlier in the season when they defeated the Prexies, 52-38.

Jack Thrush, all-star and all-state athlete for West, who was playing his last game of basketball for the Cowboys, proved himself to be a good floorman and good sport as he passed off to his teammates practically every time the ball came into his possession and never once acted as though he wanted to end his high school career in a blaze of glory.

In the preliminary contest, Clarence Smith, paced the Vice Presidents with eight tallies as they stumbled over the Buckaroos and landed on the short end of a 24-20 count.
